YOUR OWN BACK YARD

By Hal E. Roach ✓

Farina, in bad with the rest of the kids, is told to play in his own back yard by his mother. The kids play a lot of dirty tricks on him and he^{is} chased all over the town by some cops who are on the trail of what they think are mad dogs. Farina falls asleep in a blind man's chair and when he wakes up the tin cup is filled with money. He buys a new suit and a wagon full of toys. When the other kids ask him for some of them he tells them to go and play in their own back yard.
